Danvers, Mass. – December 15, 2009 - Copyright Clearance Center (CCC), a not-for-profit organization that is the world's leading provider of copyright licensing solutions, has announced that John Wiley & Sons has selected Rightslink as the online licensing solution for the global publisher's portfolio of top scientific, technical, medical, and scholarly journals, encyclopedias, books and online products.

Wiley will add Rightslink to over 1,300 journals, by mid-November 2009. With Rightslink, users will be able to obtain permission to reproduce Wiley articles (in whole or part) directly from the article abstract online at Wiley InterScience. Rightslink will be added to over 7,500 online books and other online content during 2010.

Wiley publishes scientific, technical, medical, and scholarly journals, encyclopedias, books, and online products and services; professional/trade books, subscription products, training materials, and online applications and Web sites; and educational materials for undergraduate and graduate students and lifelong learners.

Through Wiley InterScience, the company provides online access to a virtual library consisting of three million journal articles, 7,500 books, 100 major reference works, a dozen databases, and the Current Protocols laboratory manuals.

Rightslink supports publishers' online strategy by providing their customers with instant reprint and permission services, 24/7, worldwide. It helps generate new revenue, improve customer satisfaction, and provide publishers with valuable insight into customer buying behavior. Rightslink integrates seamlessly with online content wherever it resides: on a Web site, on an archive server or at a third-party aggregator. It automates the entire licensing process, from secure order processing and workflow management to real-time reporting and royalty payments while adapting to each publisher's unique licensing requirements and business processes.

“We're very excited to be featuring Rightslink as an integral part of our licensing services,” said Kris Kliemann, VP and Director of Global Rights, John Wiley & Sons Inc. “It is important for our contributors and publishing partners to know that Wiley is providing a top class service to increase awareness and legal reuse of their published work. It is equally important to us that our customers can clear permission requests quickly, easily and securely directly from our website. Rightslink provides the functionality we need to achieve both by automating a wide range of content licensing options and ultimately increasing customer satisfaction.”

“For over 200 years, Wiley has grown and evolved in order to meet the changing needs of its customers in the digital age,” said Miles McNamee, VP, Licensing and Business Development, CCC. “We are honored that Wiley has selected Rightslink to help license its impressive collection of content.”
