RightFind® for Emerging Life Science Companies

The ability to seek, discover, access, and share scientific, technical, and medical (STM) articles is vital to the success of an emerging life science organization. But without a centralized information center or library, there are significant barriers to retrieving and sharing content. Creating an information center is ideal, but that would require substantial investments in time and money — both of which may be in short supply for growing companies.

Copyright Clearance Center and its subsidiary RightsDirect are pleased to offer RightFind for emerging life science companies. This content workflow solution provides you and your colleagues with fast, easy access to the full range of published content you need — anytime, anywhere.

RightFind includes an integrated CCC/RightsDirect copyright license to facilitate copyright-compliant collaboration. The result? A technology solution that bundles a robust set of best-in-class resources to provide a cost-effective, self-service information center.
