Challenge
Securing copyright permission to share, reference, and repurpose content can be confusing and time-consuming for your users.

Solution
Create custom links from your content to connect users directly to options for purchasing permissions for your titles on CCC’s Marketplace website. From there, users can quickly check available rights, review terms and conditions, and obtain the rights they need.

CCC has created several options for Rightsholders to link content to the licensing pages on Marketplace:

1. Open URL Template

   Title level (Journals or Books): Create a link that will direct users to a specific publication on CCC’s Marketplace website. For journals, the user will be prompted to add specific article information to review, select, and pay for rights. This solution is the best option for books and journals if specific article identifiers (i.e. the DOIs) are not readily available. It’s also a good option for journal content if you have DOIs but lack the ability to automatically create links for new content.

   Replace the bolded text below with the journal ISSN (ISBN if work is a book):

   For example, the sample link below directs the user to the journal, Aging Health, published by Future Medicine:

   Article level (Journals or Books with Chapter-Level Identifiers): Create a link to direct users to the specific article or chapter they are requesting permission to use. This solution is the best option when specific article or chapter identifiers (i.e. the DOIs) are readily available, and when you have the ability to automatically create links for new content.

   Replace the bolded text in the example below with the article level ID:

   For example, the sample link below directs the user to a specific article published in the journal, Aging Health, by Future Medicine:

   Note: Make sure to replace the forward slash in the DOI, “/” with “%2F”
