

CCC Named One of the 2021 Top Places to Work in Massachusetts

The Boston Globe Honors Companies That Put Their Employees First

December 14, 2021 – Danvers, Mass. – CCC, a leader in advancing copyright, accelerating knowledge, and powering innovation, has been named as one of the 2021 Top Places to Work in Massachusetts by the Boston Globe. CCC ranked #33 in the large company category (organizations between 250-900 employees).

To compile its 14th annual Top Places to Work list, the Globe partnered with Energage, an employee research firm, to administer anonymous employee surveys rating companies on their flexibility, leadership, values, and other criteria. More than 80,000 employees at 363 companies in Massachusetts participated and 150 employers came out on top.

According to the Globe, “Employers are increasingly aware their companies don’t exist in a bubble, and they need to respond to workers’ needs, as well as to societal changes, especially during these unprecedented times of racial unrest and political upheaval, not to mention a global health crisis. This means doing more to support employees’ mental health and expanding efforts to diversify their staffs to include, learn from, and promote people of all ethnicities and orientations.”

“We are honored to be included on this prestigious list,” said Tracey Armstrong, President and CEO, CCC. “At CCC, we’ve created a number of programs to help employees as they adapt to social changes and an evolving workplace. We pride ourselves on being an agile and dynamic organization strengthened by an increasingly diverse community and a vibrant, innovative culture.”

CCC will be developing sustainable practices and act as champions of the SDGs during the Decade of Action (2020-2030) specifically in the areas of Quality Education; Industry, Innovation and Infrastructure; and Reduced Inequalities.
