WHAT'S NEW WITH MARKETPLACE?

Marketplace: February 2023 Release

CCC Marketplace (marketplace.copyright.com) is a self-service, ecommerce site that enables people in business, publishing, higher education, and other markets to quickly search, order, and manage permissions to use and share content to conduct business and enrich instruction and to request article reprints and ePrints from thousands of publishers around the world.

With the February 2023 release of Marketplace, we will enable customers to purchase access to content. By integrating content delivery in Marketplace, we now deliver a streamlined, easy-to-navigate workflow that enables customers to get copyright permission, order content, and article reprints, and manage all transactional purchases in one place.

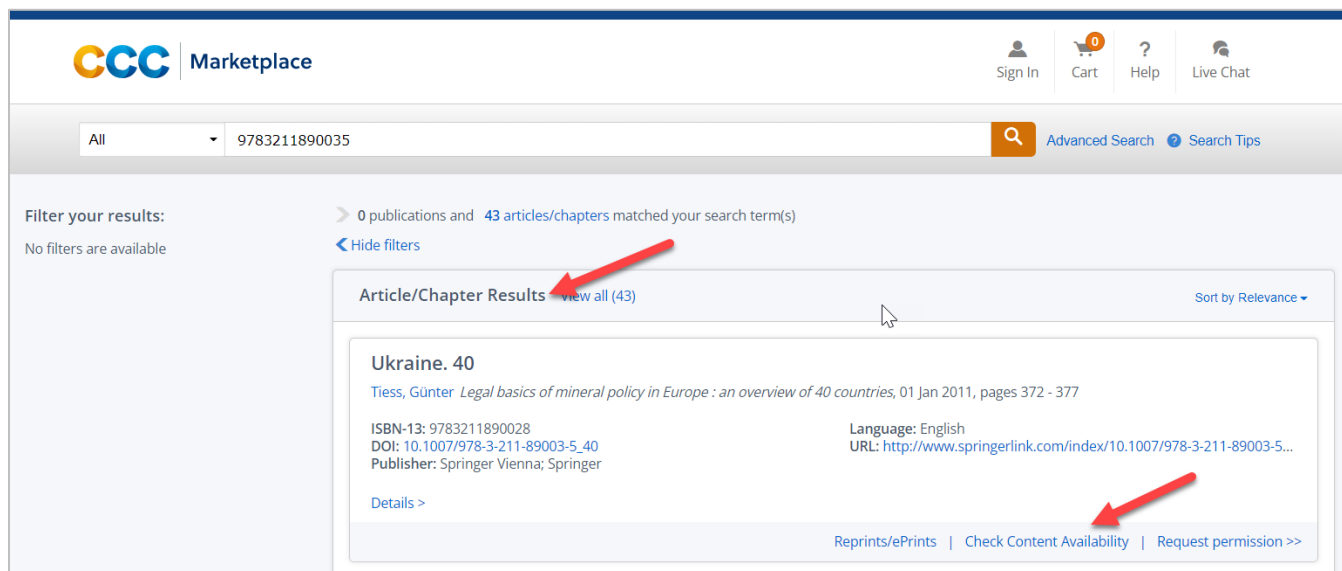

Key enhancements in the February 2023 release include:

- The ability for customers to purchase articles and book chapters if the content is available.
- The convenience and flexibility for customers to access articles or chapters via download, eReader, or Adobe Digital Editions.
- The ability for tax exempt customers to submit and validate their tax certificates.

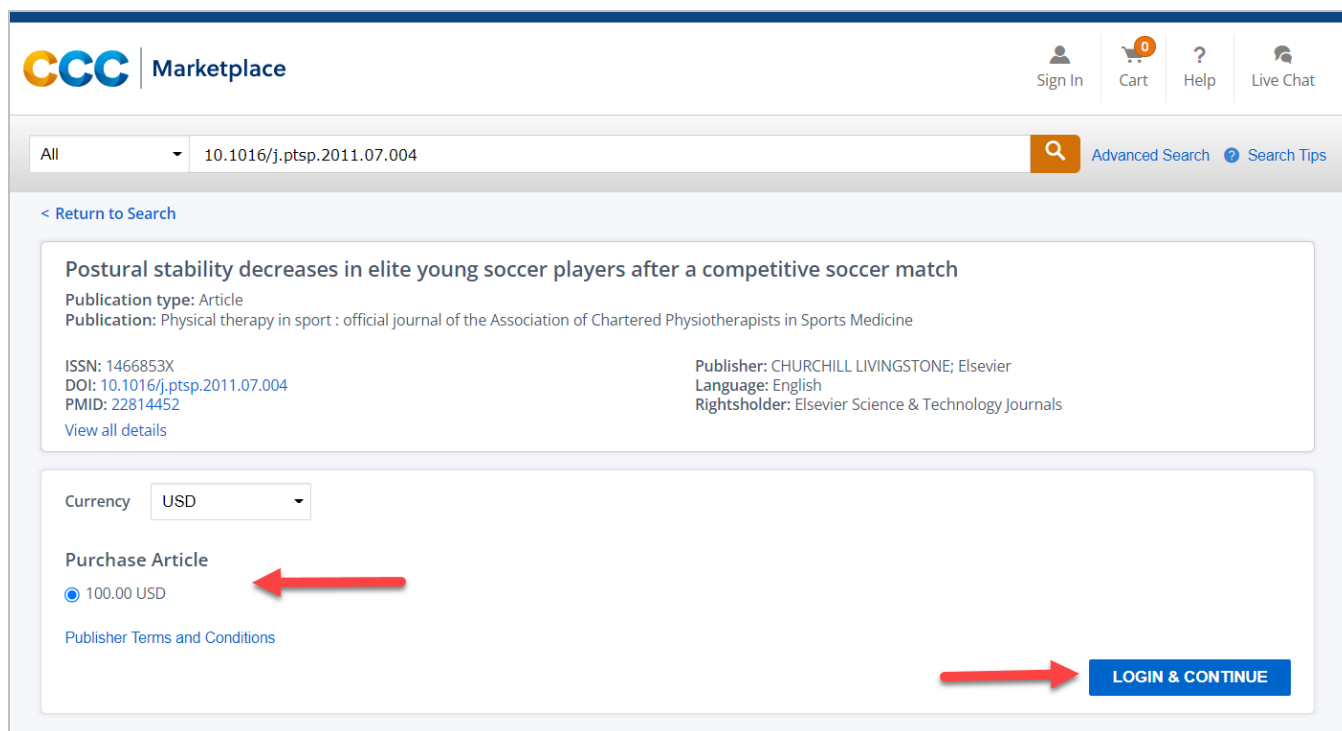

Customers Can Purchase Access to Articles and Chapters

Updated Workflow to Support Purchasing Articles and Chapters

Article and chapter search results display a “Check Content Availability” link that allows customers to see if content is available and purchase access to view the content. See screenshot below.

If content is available, the customer is navigated to the Request Details page where they can view pricing options. They can then log in or create an account to purchase the content. See screenshot below.

Once purchased, a separate email is sent with a link to access the content. The content is also available through Manage Account.

Accessing Purchased Articles and Chapters

Customers can access purchased content by selecting the link in the content availability emails or by going directly to Manage Account and viewing order details. Purchased content will display a “View” button as shown in the screenshot below.
